1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claims 1-3, 5-13, 15-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Langsford (US 2004/0027268).

Langsford teaches a method for demodulating a signal transmitted over a wireless channel, and a wireless fading-channel demodulator including a receiving-processing portion 41 which receives and converts sub-array group analog communication signals that are received via M antenna sub-array groups, into digital input signals, multiplies 420 the digital input signals by corresponding weighted vector elements, and sums the product for each sub-array group to generate M diversity-beamforming signals, a signal magnitude and phase processing portion which multiplies 420 the magnitude (620; p. 2, paragraph 0025; p. 5, par. 0056) and phase 630 of a representative digital input signal, a final beam output portion (Fixed beam forming network) which sums the M products output, and a weighted vector calculation portion 430.

With regard to claims 5, and 15, Langsford teaches a signal receiving method and a signal receiving system for mobile communications including a plurality of sum-array groups 640, a radio frequency module unit that extracts analog communication signals 710, and a wireless fading-channel demodulation unit that receives and converts 710 the sub-array group analog communication signals into digital input signals, generates M diversity-beamforming signals (Fixed beam forming network) using the digital input signals and weighted vector elements 430, and outputs a final output signal (Corrected output) by using the magnitude (620; p. 2, paragraph 0025; p. 5, par. 0056) and phase 630 of a representative digital input signal selected for each of the M sub-array groups and a corresponding one of the M diversity-beamforming signals.

3. Claims 4, and 14 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

4. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
